led Sir Adrian to the door just at that moment?

"What it it?" he asked hurriedly.

"I told Gracia to-day," her ladyship replied, "that I wished her to pack up and go. Under the pretext of seeking for a box she has spent the whole of this afternoon in the lumber-rooms, and it seems to me that she has taken what she liked from them."

Then I found my voice.

"Sir Adrian," I said, "I assure you that what I have here is my own, entirely my own, and belongs to no one else."

quest; but I must do it to save him.
"I am so very sorry," I replied; "but indeed I cannot, Sir Adrian."

He turned to a little buhl cabinet that stood near.
"Give it to me, Gracia." he said. "I will lock it up here until we have time to go into the matter."

It was a moment of terrible suspense to me.
"Will you promise me." I asked. "that "the river rose and awept me away.
